CAUTIONARY WEATHER ALERT FOR SALEM COUNTY

(SALEM, NJ)—With the possibility of a Nor'easter on Saturday, Freeholder Bruce Bobbitt, Chair of the County Public Works Committee, today issued a cautionary weather alert for Salem County residents. There exists a threat of flooding, high wind and rain.

"We believe that with experiences from Hurricane Irene we should pay very close attention to Mother Nature happenings," said Freeholder Bruce Bobbitt. "The ground is still pretty wet and ditches and culverts still have water. Our Public Works Department has worked diligently to relieve flooding since Hurricane Irene."

The Office of Emergency Management recommends that residents monitor traditional media sources TV, newspaper and radio to stay informed of breaking news. If driving stay alert for downed wires and flooded roads.

The Public Works Department will continuously evaluate the weather and be on standby throughout the storm," continued Freeholder Bobbitt. "Our public works crews have done well in the past and they will do it again."

If anyone has questions or concerns please call the OEM at 856-769-2900 or if there is an emergency call 911.
